

Misti Warner General Manager
Berry Grower extraordinaire

Our backyards are now being designed as relaxing outdoor living spaces...a kind of beautiful oasis to escape to after a long day. We currently surround ourselves with garden plants to satisfy most of our senses.: fragrant flowers, colorful shrubs and towering trees with leaves blowing softly in the wind. Most of us are missing one important sensory experience. Taste! Most gardens are missing the best part! Imagine sitting amongst those flowers and shrubs listening to leaves twinkling in the breeze while eating juicy berries and mint infused iced tea.

Nothing beats fresh grown berries in the summer and it couldn't be easier to grow your own! Strawberries, blackberries, raspberries, grapes and blueberries begin arriving at the garden center in early spring in the form of bare root plants. These are dormant plants that only need to be popped into a prepared garden bed or pot in order to thrive. As soon as the weather warms up, their gorgeous leaves begin to emerge and flowers and berries soon thereafter.

What would pair up better with homegrown berries than the fragrance of fresh mint, lavender and basil. Herbs are so easy to grow in Flagstaff and many of them are actually perennials that will come back every year. Herbs are at home in the ground, hanging baskets, whiskey barrel planters or even in just small pots spread through your garden.

Taking care of the pests that might visit your garden edibles takes just a little more thought. No one wants to spray poison on a berries that your are going to eat! Luckily, garden centers are now filled with organic pesticides that are completely safe around pets and children and can be sprayed on all edible food crops including herbs and berries. All the staff members at Warner's are trained to assist you in selecting the perfect organic pesticides and fertilizers to make your garden thrive!

Let the knowledgeable staff at Warner's help you to create the outdoor living space of your dreams. With the opening of our new outdoor living design center, it is easier than ever to create beautiful patios and backyard kitchens with custom barbeques, pizza ovens, fire pits and seating areas. Stop by and see the new design center today!

